Gun Inventor Arranges Chimes Upon Which Crack Shot Will Play

When G. L. Becker planned his shooting exhibition for the Ogden Rodeo and Labor day show at the butt park, he conceived the idea that ball park, he conceived the idea that if he could play a tune on a chime target with a Browning automatic rive it would be an interesting feat. To do this, however, required powerful chimes that would within and the shock of a rifle bullet and at the same time ring in harmony. It seemed reasonable to suppose that such chimes or belis could be obtained in the United States. However, after twing for all months to find such chimes, a message received from Chicago has week stated that it was impossible to obtain them anywhere.

Instead of giving up Mr. Becker sought the help of John M. Browning, the famous inventor of guns Mr. Browning was busy. He was at his beach hard at work finishing a magniture rifls for the French government. He was deeply absorbed in this work and in a hurry to finish the gun. Resides, his time was very valuable—worth perhaps 21000 a day, oftimes nearly that sum per hour. Mr. Becker knew it was an imposition to ask the great inventor to devote any of his time to so trivial a matter as a chime target. However, it was a matter of public spirit. John Browning's mind was engroused with the gun, but his heart ever beats for Orden. Not only did he listen, but he became interested and he stopped work on the gun on which the French government was walting, and proceeded, with the help of his brother. J. E. Browning, to build a chime target that would meet the requirements.

Here you have the story of the greatest inventor of theorems, that ever lived, devoting his priceless time and corregy to constructing an insignificant chime target. He icts a government walt because of his civic pride and public spirit and Becker passes up the Grand American Handleap so that he can shoot free of cost for Ogden.
